its implications tor the Indian Automobile Industry. This study has stated that the implementation of the commitments undertaken by India as a member of the WTO will have far reaching implications for the automobile industry in India. As regards the impact on the domestic automobile industry in other developing countries, this study has stated that the countries which have allowed'the import of second hand (used) vehicles have not been successful in establishing a competitive automobile industry.

However, even after removal of quantitative restrictions the imports will still be subject to applicable tariffs, technical standards and environment and safely norms. These measures singly or in combination can be appropriately used to create a level playing field for the domestic automobile industry. A decision on this is.sue will be taken in due course after examining all relevant aspects.
